

“All in the Family”

Racine Art Museum | 441 Main St.

Sibling rivalry isn't all bad. Sure it makes road trips hell on parents, but properly channeled, such strife can spur sibs to heightened achievement. Case in point are the ceramic collaborations of identical twins Kelly and Kyle Phelps, which address the complex role of the middle class in contemporary American society and form the focus of the Racine Art Museum's new exhibition. "All in the Family" displays works made by familial pairings—siblings, couples, and parents and children—to ask questions about how our closest relationships shape the creative process. The exhibition opened Sunday, June 21.

“The Big Idea III: Envisioning”

Latino Arts | 1028 S. Ninth St.

Having been subsidized by the U.S. Department of Education and acknowledged for excellence and innovation in the arts by the College Board, the Advancing Literacy and Math through Art Program has not lacked in official recognition. Further evidence of the program's success is exhibited in "The Big Idea III: Envisioning," which contains curriculum, information about visiting artists, images of lessons in progress and, most importantly, artworks by Bruce-Guadalupe Elementary and Middle School students in second through eighth grades. "The Big Idea III: Envisioning" is on display at Latino Arts Inc. from June 25 through Aug. 25.
