RAM announces opening of two exhibits

RACINE — Racine Art Museum, 441 Main St., announces the opening of two exhibitions. Both continue through Feb. 5. They are:

'Honoring Fifty Years of Watercolor Wisconsin'

In 2016, Wustum Museum of Fine Arts turns 75 and Wustum's longest running exhibition, "Watercolor Wisconsin," turns 50. "Watercolor Wisconsin" was inaugurated in 1966 in response to a long-term and dedicated interest in this form of painting and has been presented every year since.

In honor of this milestone, RAM is honoring the exhibit and Wustum's commitment to supporting the medium and regional artists with an exhibition of works purchased from the shows that became part of RAM's permanent collection. It is titled "Honoring Fifty Years of Watercolor Wisconsin" and featured artists include Amy Arntson, Nancy Ekholm Burkert, Warrington Colescott, Jean Crane, Sherman Groenke, David Holmes, Robert Johnansen, Joanna Poehlmann, Leslie Vansen and Lee Weiss.

'Made in Mexico: Contemporary Art Jewelers with Mexican Heritage'

Not afraid to use jewelry to share stories or reflect emotion, many contemporary art jewelers create work that is thought-provoking and engaging. Even when not being worn, their pieces can reflect the personal, social and cultural.

This exhibition features the work of three artists who use nonprecious materials to explore their Mexican heritage. In addition to investigating ideas and issues that have personal meaning, Lorena Angulo, Jorge Manilla and Georgina Trevino create works that speak to the influence of collective histories and shared experiences.

The diversity of materials represented by these artists corresponds to the innovation of contemporary art jewelry worldwide. Whether they have a metalsmithing background or not, many of those creating art jewelry freely utilize whatever medium best suits their working style, has specific meaning for them, and/or suits their artistic vision.
